It was a sunny day. Bobby was going for a walk after finishing his homework. Bobby felt hungry because he didn’t have enough food for lunch. He saw a fast food shop and bought a crunchy chicken leg. Then, he went chewing the chicken leg cheerfully.

When Bobby passed the corner of the street, he saw a beggar who wore clothes with patches sitting beside the wall. He had a small bowl in front of him and he was chewing down a loaf of bread.

Suddenly, a stray dog with black spots rushed towards the beggar and barked at him. The dog wanted the bread. The beggar was too weak and scared that he could not attack the angry dog. The dog snatched the bread from the beggar’s trembling hand. The beggar screamed.

Bobby tried to chase the bad dog but it ran so fast that it made Bobby’s leg ache, so he gave up. The beggar was desperate and sobbed, “I saved six dollars for a long time to buy a piece of bread and now it is gone.” The beggar continued to weep.

Bobby felt sorry for the beggar, so he gave his chicken leg to the beggar and handed him twenty dollars. Bobby said, “It is for you, I will give you some of my father’s old clothes tomorrow.” “It’s very kind of you. Thank you very much,” the beggar exclaimed. “I am Bobby. What is your name?” Bobby asked. “I don’t know. I am an orphan since two years old. This is a secret. Don’t tell anyone,” he replied. Bobby nodded.

On his way home, Bobby was very satisfied after helping the beggar. Bobby learnt that helping others is the spring of happiness.